CLASS POEM

Like Roman Janus here we stand, twofold,
And silent muse on years now closed fore'er.
With solemn mien we shut those doors of gold
And end the past, of high-school years so fair.
But 'tis no time to grieve or idle be.
More weighty things than these come to the fore.
For looking forward now great things we see;
We ope the gates, press onward evermore.
For life, a vista long and twisting, winds
From temple steps to places dark and dim.
With fear, but with undaunted, hopeful minds,
We follow Truth and Wisdom, God's own glim.
And therefore, friends, we start anew and fresh,
To weave the tapestry of Life, no less.

FREDERIC JOSLYN.

Class History

Beneath a spreading shingled roof
This class of ours has been
From Sophomores (most verdant youth)
To Seniors, safe kept in,
But now protection ceases; so
We'll take it on the chin.

As Sophs we chose as president,
The Boots we all have known,
While Harrigan as substitute
Kept on without a groan;
With Auditor Cataldo there
Our hopeful seeds were sown.

And Secretary Tufts, we know,
Did all there was to do,
While Baumann boldly had to go
As Treasurer, to glue
His name before his comrades' eyes
As advertisers do.

Our class (divided as it was)
Began a year of strife,
Escaping from the Juniors' claws
And from the Seniors' knife;
But now we're Seniors! What a change
In three short years of life!

As man to man, I can't recall
Just when the Social was,
But if I say 'twas in the hall,
I guess that fills the clause;
And some they say enjoyed the thing
While others proffer "Haws".

Well, anyhow, the football team
Was not what it should be,
But then our boys were young and green,
While now they're fat and free,
And men (almost) so worldly wise,
(The wisdom's hard to see!)

'Twas then we first began to see
"Commercial Club" on signs.
I understand they had a spree
At Boone beneath the pines
(At least, I hope such trees grow there,
It's easy on the lines.)

They also had a dance, it seems,
Upon November ten;
Attendance passed their fondest dreams,
A real success, and then
Some more; the local social light
Shone bright November ten.

So then to Junior-dom we rose
Triumphant, bold as Jays,
But why above us, goodness knows,
Are Seniors and their ways?
Ambition upward soared until—
We'd been there several days!

Our staff was chosen wisely yet,
With Ray and Harrigan,
Whom none can ever quite forget
As chief and second man;
Dot Furbush was our private sec.
And Bob, adjusting man.

Next autumn brought a lot of things,
And football, one of these.
'Twas then the boys first felt the stings
That came from many D's
Because it kept them off the squad
(Some folks are hard to please.)

This year the team improved a bit
O'er last year's rate and score,
But many of our class did sit
Until they were quite sore
Upon the bench, while Seniors had
Their chance to make us roar.

A social was our brightest thought
So Linda was elected
To serve as chairman on the spot,
But somehow unexpected,
The thing did not take hold, and so
The social was rejected.

The hockey stars went forth to play,
And also just to skate;
They won no games (the records say)
They lost exactly eight.
But anyhow, they hoped to be
Good at a later date.

The Club Commercial held a jig
November ten again,
But this one did not go so big
(A dearth of girls and men)
So change the subject. Let us see
What Dramatists did then.

They were, as always, popular
And full of good intent;
We had a member Burke in there
As second president.
I might just add the plays were good
So everybody went.

The next affair we took in hand
Was for the Red Cross call;
The Seniors were, you understand,
The leaders of it all,
But we stepped in and did our part
Lest they alone might fall.

We canvassed here and canvassed there,
Front, side, and kitchen door,
Collecting dollars everywhere,
In mansion, shack, or store
From those who wished to do some good
For those who needed more.

The hockey team for girls was out
Each day they weren't too lame
From taking blows (without a doubt.)
It really is a shame,
That after using all that pep
They tied each battled game.

And now we come to something fine,
Our grand farewell to those
Who brightly in their day did shine,
Whose schooldays soon would close
And who would spend their coming years
In work or sweet repose.

The classic was the Prom (you're right!)
And Perna was the head
Of everything that lively night.
And, friends, I've heard it said
That when the cash was counted out
The class was "out of red."

Now comes the band, the band we know
As great in local eyes,
Out west to Evanston did go
To take the cake and prize
Away from every other school
About an equal size.

They won first prize for drilling and
A second for their notes,
We think they all deserve a hand
For toiling in those coats
Beneath the hot Chicago sun
To get their rivals' goats.

That's all that happened Junior year
I'm very sad to say,
And were we glad to really hear
The teacher firmly say,
"Till next September, from my sight
Dear pupils, kindly stay!"

We all trooped back to Waltham High
Some time just last September;
What was the date? I can't reply
I really can't remember,
But let it pass. We were, I know,
Quite happy, every member.

The football team indeed was good,
Our Senior boys did play,
And won as Waltham really should
Six times in ten, and they
Then tied just three and lost but one
To Newton, by the way.

The president is Ray just now
With Fahey in second chair,
While Dot and Bob repeat their bow
Because they're both still there
As secretary 'n' auditor,
Their heavy work to share.

Dramatic Club put on a play
Rehearsing all the fall;
The play was fine, 'tis truth to say.
While at South Junior Hall
That night, we came to recognize
Some actors at our call.

At Nutting's Perna held the Dance
For Seniors in their prime;
It was December, thus a chance
To make a warmer clime
Within the windy walls to tune
Of syncopated rime.

The Seniors then got on the lam
To get themselves a place
In "Mrs. Temple's Telegram."
It was a lively race
And he who won, on posters saw
A likeness of his face.

The play went over simply "swell"
With Chairman Boots again,
But stick around and let me tell
About our hockey men,
Who played the semi-final game
And lost to Walpole then.

And now a little different thought
For I don't wish to bore;
The city has so kindly bought
For us a new gym floor
So we can do our stuff as it
Was never done before.

A social seems to be the rage,
Commercial Club had two;
Dramatic Club, so saith a sage,
They never should outdo;
And so this latter group went out
And held two socials, too!

The girls have played a hockey and
At basketball I hear.
Miss Sewall has the records scanned
To check those points so dear,
So numerals and letters go
For taking part this year.

This year the Mirror came out twice
With Raymond as the chief,
And they found out who paid the price
(But surely not in grief!)
That these editions were just "swell,"
Which was to our relief.

As all good things must come to close
So must this recitation.
I've done my best to quite disclose
Each Senior occupation,
And if you want to find some fault—
I'm off on my vacation!

RICHARD LYON.

Class Prophecy

It was in June, 1956, that my friend, Frederic Joslyn, Chairman of the Watch and Ward Society, and I went to the Gardner L. Burt Burlesque, to see the preview of Harold Boor's latest picture, "Why Girls Leave Home"—in seven parts—and starring his wife, the former Carolyn Brehm.

We stood for some time outside the Theatre, gazing at the posters of "Fanny G., the Fan Dancer", painted by that eminent artist, Marcelle Iodice, before we came to the realization that "Fanny G." was none other than Frances G. Mahoney. Hastily we purchased tickets from Jean Lemon at the box-office, and after handing them to the two doormen, Locke and Keyes, we rushed into the imposing interior of the Burt Burlesque. As we entered, Harlem Fleming's Philharmonic Orchestra began to play "SHE USED TO BE A SCHOOL TEACHER, BUT SHE HAS NO CLASS NOW", This composition was by two of my former class-mates, Long and Short.

From our programmes we learned that "Fofo" Collura was playing the harp; Thomas Gallagher, the 'cello; Robert Ahlman, the piccolo; Clifford Curtis, the flute; Lawrence Harrigan, the lyre; Walter Pope, the piano; Babe Fahey, the xylophone; Roy Van Wart, the violin; and Stephen Hodge, the drums. With a deafening crash the selection came to an end, the lights dimmed, and the Kaswell Newsreel—Seize all, Nose all—was flashed upon the screen.

The first episode shown by the Newsreel was an interview with the famous mathematician and physicist, Joseph Keane, who with the help of his colleagues had proved the Einstein Theory to be false. As his collaborators, Thomas Curtin, Clinton Eldridge, Edward Burns, and Alan Ringrose, nodded and stroked their long white beards, Joseph endeavored to explain the new principle he had discovered, but our attention was distracted from the screen by the entrance of Richard Nellson, the beer baron. Surrounded by his bodyguards, John Viscogliosi, Guido Yamartino, Joseph Rowe and Robert Larson, he strode down the aisle, the cynosure of all eyes, and after glancing serreptitiously around—his hand on his gun—he slunk into his seat.

When I next looked at the screen, there was being shown the pictures of the two leading contestants in the race for the Dana Heath Cup, and the title of "THE YOUNGEST GRANDFATHER IN SEVEN COUNTIES." They were George Ellis and his wife, the former Dorothy Furbush, and Raymond Tennanty and his wife, the former Charlotte Littlefield. In a brief speech, Dorothy said that she felt that she owed everything to Clark's Contented Cows' Milk; while Charlotte said that she attributed her success to Olsen's Ozonated Orange Juice.

The Kaswell Newsreel next took us to the wilds of Lakeview, where those intrepid explorers, John Carruthers, Robert Champion, Domenic Cusano, Harvey Roberts, and George Warner were setting out to chart the unexplored country. They had docked at the Cambridge Water Basin on the steamer Cruiser Kruse, captained by George Renna. The explorers were fortunate in being able to secure two native guides, Annette Rhault and Florence LaChapelle to assist them. As the scene closed, our adventurers were choosing a suitable location for their camp, Britt Haven, named in honor of the financier of the trip, Mary Britt.

Next, in an exclusive interview, Victor Joos, who was defending his title of "PAPERWEIGHT CHAMPION" against Russell Ferro, stated the reasons why he felt confident of winning again. His press agent, Gerald Beauman denied his reported engagement to Marion Lyden, saying that Victor had never heard of the woman.

The next news item transferred us to Southampton, where that new, monstrous liner, S. S. Cataldo, was about to make her maiden voyage. This new liner was captained by my old friend Peter Bogert. On the deck, surrounded by a group of photographers, among whom we recognized Christopher Beattie, James Brown, and Charles Christie, stood Priscilla Smith, who had just come into an estate of five million left to her by her dear, departed husband, William Archdeacon. It is now reported that Priscilla has broken all records by becoming engaged to the three of the Midivani brothers at the same time.

The hog-calling contest in Arkansas was where we were next taken. The competitors, William Krongard, Robert Rhodes, Robert Wright, John Zeno, Harold Strum, Thomas Sabetti, and Arthur Schaufus were lined up with their wives, Judith Waterhouse, Louise Wittemore, Esther Wilson, Ruth Whittemore, Inez Uhlin, Eugenia Tyler, and Edith Truesdell, ready to begin.

The judges of the contest, Viola Johnson, Mary Juliano, and Margaret Kann promised to give an unbiased decision, and then the contest began. The newsreel mercifully spared us the agony of being forced to listen, but after the contest, the winner, Harold Strum, was presented with a set of teacups, made by the Taylor-Tower China Factory.

Next there was flashed upon the screen an exclusive interview with the two lawyers, Ina Adcock and Helen Ballantine, opposing each other in the notorious Corson-LoPresti murder case. In a concise speech, each stated her reasons for believing her client innocent, but woman-like, the interview ended in a fight, with Adcock going down under the hay-makers delivered by Ballantine.

The last episode shown by the Kaswell Newsreel, was an appeal by James Ryan for more funds to enable the Hurd Home for Hermits to carry on their good work. As Ryan was telling the pathetic plight of some of the inmates, several were moved to tears, and Dana Johnson, overcome with grief, was carried from the theatre in a swoon by the ushers Robert Coleman, Harold Davis, and Clyde Harvey.

With a fan-fare of trumpets the Newsreel was ended; the stage lights went on; and the curtain rose on the first act—Anderson's Acrobats. It was rather a shock to Frederic and me, to see some of our former class-mates hurling through the air; for there was Mary Lee Bettinger, hanging by her toes . . . there, Thelma Carville hanging from a rope by her nose. . . .then, in a breath-taking dive, Barbara Henry flashed across the stage, catching hold of Edith Stearms' feet (Edith holding onto Thelma's). Far, far above the audience, was Bertha Majulin, wheeling Anna Mead across a tight-rope in a wheel-barrow, while Anna balanced a plate on her nose. The climax of the act came when Derwood Frost while holding onto a wire by his teeth, sang a song, "JUST A GIGOLO". This act brought down the house, and nearly Derwood with it.

The next act was entitled "KATWICK'S KITTENS" and featured the dancing team of Helen Hibbard and Gustave Erbe. As Gustave came on the stage, Frederic began to perspire, as though under great mental strain, and when they began to dance, he jumped up from his seat and shouted in his stentorian vioce,

"Stop! As Chairman of the Watch and Ward Society, I forbid this act to continue; It is one of my duties to permit no minor to dance upon the stage, and Gustave Erbe, is obviously under age. One look at his weak, undernourished body, at his thin pallid face, would convince the most sceptical that he is far too young to dance."

As Frederic was talking, Gustave's manager, John MacIvor, stepped forth from the wings, holding Mr. Erbe's birth-certificate in his hand. This he handed to Frederic with the explanation that this type of thing happens so often, that he was always prepared. Fred, after looking the certificate over, apologized, and after he had seated himself again—was his face red—the show went on.

While Helen and Gustave danced, the Eaton Boys—William Eaton, Charles True, Frances Recka, and Fred Page—sang "She Hangs Out In Our Alley, But Oh, What She Hangs Out" by Smith & Smith (Lois and Carlton). As an added attraction, Fred Katwick, the manager of the troupe, had secured 4 residents of Samoa, Elizabeth Cushman and Leon Fernald, Fred Robichaud and Donald Husted to give an exhibition of Samoan dancing. That the audience enjoyed the dance was manifested by their cries of "Some more, Samoa", The act was concluded with this number.

The next act was the fan dancers. A ripple of expectation ran through the audience, and when the curtain rose to the strains of "THE LADY WITH THE FAN", the dancers were greeted with a round of applause. As the dancers were bowing gracefully, Frederic grasped my arm. "Do you recognize that platinum blonde, second from the left? That's Marion Hayes!"

"Yes," I agreed after a moment, "and there's Thelma Tufts with Helene Betts, Helen Campbell, Ruth Sullivan, and Helen Haley."

Then scanning our programmes, we discovered that not only were these former pupils of Waltham High here, but also Therese Chiofaro, Beulah Edwards, Shirley Andrews, Blanche Simon, and Shyrlie Tatelman.

When we had recovered from the shock of our discovery, the dance had ended, and now the Gibson Girls—Helen Ross, Hilda Day, Anna Frith, and Clara Haslam—models from the Faulkner Gown Shoppe, were parading across the stage. I took little notice of this, except for the fact that skirts were a half an inch from the floor; the hour-glass figure was considered ideal; and birds, feathers, fruit, leaves, beads and braid were distributed copiously over the crowns of the enormous hats.

A violin selection by Maestro Richard Lyon was the next feature of the act. The young Maestro, I later learned, had taken up this instrument only after he had been so successful in fiddling away his time in High School. His selection was entitled "SHE BROKE MY HEART, SO I BROKE HER JAW" by Brown and Greene. However, when a string snapped while Richard was playing he flew into a rage. Throwing his violin on the stage, he jumped up and down on it, and finally grew so violent, that John MacIvor and Joseph Marcou, attendents at Waverley, were called in to lead the roaring Lyon away, much to the amusement of the audience.

Next, the celebrated Arthur Johnson Harmonica Band appeared on the stage. In this band were some of the world's premier players, the most prominent being John Bresnahan, Ernest Ciarletta, R. Cormier, James Miani, and Vincent Sumner. They played several numbers which were well received, then as an encore the band played one of the director's own compositions, "HOW CAN SHE SLEEP IN BED, WHEN THERE'S SO MUCH OF HER ON THE BUREAU?"

For the concluding number the entire act joined in a song and dance. The lights were dimmed again, the screen lowered, and the coming attractions were flashed upon the silver sheet. Teamed together for the first time, were Albert Perna and Louise Rutter in a brilliant story written by Stanley Nedza and William Nay for the Mulrean Studios. In a few short scenes, Louise and Albert were shown together, first, in the opium den of Omi Khan, portrayed by Santo Orifice; next, in the hanging gardens of the Sultan, Louis Milesky, where at the command of the Sultan's favorite wife, Lillian Spencer, they are to be sacrificed. However, Captain MacDonald of the U. S. Marines, saves the day with his Three Musketeeres, Private Muise, Poirier, and Myshrall, battle with the Sultan's armed guard of 600, led by Edmund Noke, and defeat them. The last scene showed the Sultan fleeing with several of his wives, portrayed by Eleanor MacDougal, Mary Hoarde, Elizabeth Hornbeck, and Pauline Manning.

Now the feature picture was projected upon the screen. The locale of the play was in Ireland, where the hero, Harold Boor, was tending pigs. As the movie opened, Harold and the farmer's daughter, Carolyn Brehm, were making love in the pigsty, when the Traveling Salesman, Vincent Bryson, appeared. Stroking his waxed moustache, he hissed, "Be mine, proud beauty, or else—heh, heh!"

Harold then rose from among the pigs and exclaimed,

"Unhand her, cur."

Vincent, defeated, picked up his case of Fuller Brushes and slunk away. The next scene showed a quiet evening at home. Farmer Brown, James Bonomo, was reading the Good Book, his wife, Marie Boulton, knitting, and Carolyn making a sampler, while her lover, Harold, was still with the pigs. Suddenly there came a knock at the door, and Carolyn jumped up to answer it. Opening the door, she found herself confronted with the traveling salesman, who grasping her by the waist, carried her off to tie on the railroad tracks.

Meanwhile, Harold had returned, only to find his love gone. Getting out his bicycle, he pedaled to the police station. Chief Curran's wife, Madeline Curran, informed our hero, that the police were having a convention, and the chief and the entire force would not be home till next week. Harold explained his plight to her, and Madeline said that she would help by getting some of her friends to rescue Carolyn. She hastily called up the members of the bridge club, telling them to come to her house immediately. As they assembled, I recognized girls who had once been my class-mates in Waltham High. There was Ruth Johnson, whose marriage to LaRosee the Hairpin King startled Hollywood; there, Lillian McCauley, there, Helen McCarthy, President of the Hollywood Society for the Superannuation of the Poor, and there Eleanor Miele, Hollywood's best-dressed actress. They started out on their bicycles, following the road that ran parallel to the railroad tracks. Suddenly they saw on the tracks, a figure in white . . . they pedaled furiously . . . the twelve o'clock limited whizzed around the curve, bearing down upon our heroine, while Bryson sneered. Then the unexpected happened. The engineer of the train, John Rando, looked at his watch.

"Say," he called to his fireman Clarence LaMont, "we're an hour ahead of time. We've entirely forgotten about Daylight Savings. You remember, it ended yesterday."

"That's right," agreed Clarence. "Then let's stop here and eat our lunch."

The emergency brake was applied, and they stopped two feet away from the helpless Carolyn. By this time the women and Harold had arrived. Placing their bicycles against a tree, they hurried over to Bryson, and soon had him in their clutches. Our hero and heroine were thus reunited, and the last that we see of them, they are going home to raise little pigs.

With the ending of the picture, the show was ended. Frederic grasped my arm and suggested that we go back-stage to see some of our class-mates. Little did I realize his motive, for Freddie had fallen in love with Fannie G. Mahoney. This trip back-stage was the beginning of a whirl-wind courtship, that would end in his marriage two weeks hence. Behind the curtain we saw some more of our old friends. There was Richard Buckley, head electrician, with his assistant, Albert Weiner; there was Rosalie Cron, personal maid to one of the stars; Madeline Mogan, we found, was Mistress of the Wardrobe; the prompter was no other than George Dolber; Robert Lawson was the curtain puller; Tullio Iodice was the stage sweeper; and among the stage hands, who were busily setting up scenery, we saw Thomas Girolamo, Roland Gibson, Arthur Derbyshire, and Herbert Johnson. As Frederic wished to go out and dine with his "little lambie" as he called Fannie, I was left alone, in the theatre. As my day of recreation ended, the work of the scrub-women was just beginning. With their hair tied in tight knots, their skirts pinned up, they plodded into the theatre, to clean the remains of Leonard's Lasting Lucious Gum off the chairs, and slop dirty water over the dirty floors. The janitor, Clement Gallagher, told me that these women were employed for fifteen cents an hour, and their main reason for accepting this miserable wage was that they wished to be near the theatre. Suddenly I found something familiar in the walk on one of the charwomen. That was Josephine Hamilton! After going over and speaking to her, I discovered that her companions were Jennie Hebert, Gratia Harrington, Frances D'Orazio, Theresa DeMarco, and Aureta Cuniffe. We conversed for some time, and I found out that Josephine was married to Jack Wilber, and her daughter was teaching in the exclusive LUCY HOLTON SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. She told me that Theresa had had four husbands, but divorced them all. The first, Francis Dinsmore, had trumped her ace; the second, Caldwell Gannon, stayed out all night; the third, Wilfred Dufresne, criticized her make-up; and the fourth, Robert Bowman, who was now married to Margaret Harris, kept all the bed-clothes on his side. After a lenghty conversation, which was broken up by the manager, John Lane, I left. I said goodbye to the night watchman, Anthony Giardina, who then turned out the lights, leaving the Burt Theatre in total darkness, leaving it a place of mystery, haunted by the memory of my friends.

HAROLD BURKE.

Class Will

To Whom It May Concern:

Be it known that we, the class of 1934, of the Waltham Senior High School, and lately the most prominent social lights, etc., of that establishment being of sound mind and in full possession of our faculties, and capable of disposing of property, in view of the uncertainties of life do hereby appoint, transfer, bequeath, and devise our estate as follows:

To the class of 1935, we leave a loving, kindly, and understanding parent, (Mr. Burke) who is always ready and willing to dismiss pupils for no reason at all. Perhaps these new Seniors will not take advantage of Mr. Burke as we did, or thought we did.

To our class President, Raymond Tenanty, we leave a book of addresses and telephone numbers, all of which he should find useful in keeping his dates straight. A "hot tip" to go with that is Wal. 1532; that's thrown in extra, Ray.

A much torn and battered contract is given to Carolyn Brehm and Albert Perna to play the leading roles in Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. Along with the contract goes a bouquet of American Beauties to Miss Brehm sent by an unknown admirer who thinks that Carolyn should have honors as the best looking girl, but—you know—A large bunch of carrots is given to "Boots" Perna, sent by Babe Fahey who thinks that the Carioca is a disease.

George Dolber is given a big hand by the class and all the luck in the world. We had planned to give George a scholarship, but seeing that he already earned one from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, we wish him success. Congratulations, George.

Derwood Frost has so frequently expressed his desire to play shortstop, that we leave him a berth on the varsity and a bequest, the interest of which will enable him to get a new baseball suit for every game. Derwood must keep up his reputation, you know.

To Alphonse, ("Fofo" to you) Collura we donate a Browning Machine Gun Unlike other bad men, "Fofo", we figured, needed something more than a few guns. We hope that he can manage to get by with the machine gun. Just one teacher a day, "Fofo".

To Harold Burke we leave a year's subscription to Ballyhoo and Laffs so that he may be cheerful all the time. Feeling generous and having lots of money, we also give Harold a weight reducing machine in order that he may lose about 100 lbs. of avoirdupois.

To Lawrence Harrigan we allow the opportunity of coming back to school another year, and be a great help to Coach Jack Leary. We also give "Larry" a medal for each sport he has participated in.

To Judith Waterhouse we donate a complete wardrobe of the latest Parisian clothes, so that she may be as stunning when out of school as she was while in school here.

Dorothy Furbush is the receiver of a round-trip ticket to Poughkeepsie where the Olympics of 1937 will be held. The Class of '34 feel sure that "Dot" will take the place of "Babe" Didrickson and also set a few new records for women athletes.

To Harold Davis we bequeath the ever favorite novel—This is the House that Jack Built with the understanding that when Stephen grows up, he will furnish and decorate it according to his own conception.

Mr. Leary will find that we leave him a crowd of large and ambitious prospects who will work hard to put out winning teams. These boys also promise to be honest and not take home suits or equipment that does not belong to them.

To the heavily moustached fellow in Room 5 (Mr. Hodge) we bestow a flower catalogue which we believe will be handy to him in his favorite hobby of growing flowers. We also want to thank him for the accommodation of frequent rides to Watertown when we were "thumbing" to town.

Miss Marcher receives an iron-tipped pencil with the hopes that it will bring results when she taps on her desk. We also leave a sign which we believe will be helpful in keeping order and quiet in the library.

To Ruth Johnson we award a complete and unique wardrobe of newly designed bathing suits in which she may compete for the New England Beauty Contest. We also bestow upon Ruth a diamond studded gold brush and comb with which she may keep her beautiful blonde hair looking like Ann Harding's.

We donate to Margaret Harris a modernistic mahogany desk and chair and also leave her the choice of being President of Wellesley College or Chief Executive Secretary of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., as recognition of her fame in Waltham High as most studious and the most likely to succeed.

Last but not least the class of '34 with the kind permission of the faculty leave to our class clown, William Archdeacon, a half ton of blank white paper which is to be used in compiling the new "Archdeacon Unabridged Dictionary" that will be used in all high schools and colleges because of its sensible and easily understood explanations.

To the Commercial Department we donate a sum of money which is to be used only on occasions when the Commercial Course goes in the "hole", which isn't often. We also leave them a full room of noiseless typewriters so that it will not interfere with the pupils talking to one another.

To the English Department we leave a Mimeograph and Ditto machine so that the teachers will follow Miss Allen's method and have all their work stenciled on yellow paper. A good way of saving a lot of writing on blackboards, eh! what?

And to the unfortunate teachers who have had the misfortune of having the 4D1B Division we leave the happy thought that none of the eleven culprits will return. We also want to warn the 4D1B boys that if they continue with the same conduct when they get out of school as when they were in school, they will be unsuccessful in life.

We give and bequeath to our beloved faculty a large, handsomely built model of our future high school which was constructed by the promising architects of the Trade School. This model is to be placed in the school library with the hope that the inquisitive freshmen will not pester Miss Marcher to death with silly questions as "When are they going to build it?" "Is it going to have a gym?" "Where will it be located?" etc.

As our co-executors, we appoint Miss Woodward, Mr. Ward, and Miss Rigby to carry out our will as per ordered.

In testimony whereof, we set our hand, ordaining and declaring this to be our last will and testament, this sixth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-four, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixtieth.

ARMAND P. LAROSEE.

The time has come when we must say farewell. We have decided to close our literary year with this Year Book. Therefore we take this opportunity to thank everyone of you for sending us your school publication. We have found them all very interesting and have come to know what our contemporaries are doing in their respective high schools. We hope that our successors on the MIRROR STAFF will find you as interesting friends as we have.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE

to start planning what you are going to do after you graduate from High School. College may be one of the possibilities, but you might continue the thought further and plan what you want to be doing five years after you are out of High School.

Consult your Vocational Director about the various careers and their possibilities. Business is one of the main ones, and in times like these a great deal of preparation is necessary before entering it. Yes, a broad education is advisable, and then a training for some special phase.

That's why it's not too early to start planning, and that's why we invite you to come in to talk the matter over with one of the officers of this school. We would be very glad to give you our suggestions as to what courses to take to best prepare for your chosen line of business. If you have no choice we might be able to help you decide.

At any rate we hope that it may be convenient for you to come in (we do not employ any outside salesmen or canvassers) to the school at the corner of Boylston and Arlington Streets, to talk over your plans for the future. Or, write or phone L. O. White, Principal, Bryant & Stratton Commercial School, 334 Boylston Street, Boston.

CLASS MOTTO

QUIEN SABE? WHO KNOWS?

Perhaps a crazy class motto; but we're proud of it. We think we're right. Of course some complicated Latin or Greek phrase might sound better but after all, what more appropriate title, what other idea would apply so aptly to the lives of the young high school graduates, youngsters who will soon be shifting for themselves in a world whose stability is far from sure.

No one realizes better than ourselves the step before us, the giving up of the easiest life in the world. Without responsibility, without the least bit of planning or providing for ourselves, we have been happy and contented during our school years, so much so that I doubt whether we may ever be as happy again. We have true friends now; we hope we may have them always, but we know we shall not.

We go forth with high hopes and with a firm purpose of reaching the top. We are due for bitter reverses and disappointments; humiliation and discouragement may get the better of us, but we must realize that these things are the components of life. As yet we have not lived. We have merely been receiving the foundation for living. Our experiences in life must necessarily be more difficult than our preliminary training.

"We must not hope to be mowers,
And to gather the ripe gold ears,
Until we have first been sowers
And watered the furrows with tears."

May we struggle for our own success, may we fight for our own happiness, may we strive to carry out our ideals; but most of all, may we have the blessings of God to carry us on. Quien sabe?
